PREPARATIONS FOR SUFFRAGE'S FINAL RALLY

Preparations for the final great Woman's Party rally, to be held in every section of this state at the end of this month, are going forward with vim. Men and women of all parties are taking the keenest interest in these final demonstrations of the voting strength of women because they bring to Arizona for the first time in her feminist history that leading feminist and suffrage beauty, Inez Milholland, spokeswoman of New York City. This widely-known young woman brings to the twelve suffrage states the final message of the voteless women of the east: Suffrage First! Defeat the National Democratic Party.

It is seldom in this practical country that a young woman was her first fame merely because of her beauty. Beauties become almost professional across the water, and you can buy their pictures in every London shop. Inez Milholland has fought against this easy notoriety. It was

Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain

In her Vassar college days that Inez Milholland, from the first a feminist, became celebrated for her physical beauty. She wanted to shine because of her brains and personality. She was mentioned first as a beauty. Then a few years ago suffrage action was taken in the east—giving out letters. Inez Milholland was the young woman at Vassar who recited the rules of the college as to suffrage speeches by giving her fellow-students object demonstrations with tiny models in eloquent language. She was the college organizer of "voiceless speaking." When she took up law, graduating from the New York Law University, her reputation as a beauty again stood in her way. No matter how eloquent or how dryly technical were her pleadings, it was her beauty that was mentioned first. Inez Milholland will tell you that mere looks are more effectively stand in the way of a flower feminist in these days than any other one asset. Always a suffragist first and a professional woman after—she is the brilliant, symbolic figure of Victory on horseback, in silver mail and with floating purple cloak; she came to be identified with picturesque pageantry instead of close and arduous work.

CHICAGO ALDERMAN MAKES JEFFERY TOUR

In law offices. In short, brilliant, enter and clear-cut thinker though she is, it is her purely feminine gift that is still mentioned first.

Even when she married Eugene Boissevain, a Dutchman, and lost her American citizenship, it was impossible for the public to associate this incorrigible young feminist with mere matrimony. She is still "Inez Milholland," the suffrage beauty, to the vast number of newspaper and magazine readers.

Mrs. Boissevain's three great meetings in Arizona will be held in Phoenix, in Tucson and in Prescott, and will draw to them many men and women from the surrounding towns, anxious to hear this final incisive appeal from one of the best known of the radical suffrage leaders in the country. News of the meetings will be thoroughly spread over the state, Mrs. Boissevain's classical head on a purple, white and gold suffrage flag taking the news of the three rallies north and south.

The Southeastern meeting at Tucson is in charge of Mrs. E. St. Clair Thompson, field secretary of the Southern States for the Congressional Union. The Tucson meeting will have as chairman the newly elected state chairman of Arizona, Mrs. H. M. Claret of Nogales, who will respond to the appeal of Mrs. Boissevain for the east in a beautiful ceremony. Mrs. Iris Calderhead is in charge of the Prescott meeting in the north, with headquarters at the St. Michael hotel; she will also have charge of the platform meetings of Mrs. Boissevain, who wrecks at Winslow as she leaves the state. Mrs. Boissevain will be
